Buy Now: Q: What happens if a non-Special attacks a creature with Protection? This is a two-part question. If I have a creature with Protection and my opponent plays a non-Special which triggers the creature's ability, do I choose which creature to tap for mana before or after the opponent has to tap for mana to pay for the Special? I am also interested in knowing if the creature is damaged by the triggering Special before or after the creature's ability resolves. A: Prior to the declaring any cost for the ability that creates the trigger, you must declare which creature gets priority at that time. Rule 806.2 First, the active player announces how each of the creatures he or she controls will gain or lose life. (See rule 611, "Gaining and Losing Life.") Then, the active player announces the cost, if any, of each triggered ability that has a cost and a triggered ability that doesn't. (See rule 605, "Casting Cost
